THE Law Revision Commission, through the Attorney-General, disclaim responsibility for the principles embodied in the Bill to regulate the printing of newspapers and books and the keeping of printing presses within the Coluny. The Commission, the learned $1.25 each on silver shares of $50 each. Attorney says, have simply brought the existing law together, with such portions of the English law as may conceivably be made the Legislative Council to adopt or discard so much of the Bill as they may think fit, the Commission not recommending its adoption as it stands. The idea of a body of indown to legislate against the Press, in this the last quarter of the nigeteenth century, imagine, be to let the first and second clauses in the colony and engined by Mr. Fenwick. stand—the one giving the short title and the other repealing the existing Ordinmaining twenty-five clauses. Few persons. we venture to predict, will be found to supthe statute book as suspicious characters, their good behaviour, and placing abourd restrictions and limitations on their right to take a run to Macao or Canton for change of air. The same laws that protect the person and property of the individual also protect ment under the common law. We claim no statutory privileges or immunities for the press; neither can we without a protest submit to statutor, disabilities and indignities, A public writer occupies a position of weighty responsibility, but the force of public opinion and the operation of the general law tre or should be sufficiently powerful he may be guilty without the operation of a statute specially directed egainst his profesconvert to their own use the large funds or which pass through their bands. . Why then, should the profession of journalism be security for its conformity to the law? far as we are concerned, have been allowed to remain untouched and uncommented on. If they did no good they did little harm beyoud causing some needless trouble and this was gradually growing less as observance or enforcement of their provisions became more laz. Now, however, the Council is called upon to deal with the matter de nature of things, be enforced, and which are ready on the statute book, either here or in its re-enactment now. The tendency of legislation in England on this subject is Press, not towards re-enacting them. When writing on the new Bill two days ago Orders may be sent to Daily Press Office, where we were under the impression that the law requiring newspaper proprietors to give security was still in existence in England, although not enforced : we now find. from a marginal note to the Bill read second time on Wednesday, that it was repealed by 32 and 39 Vic., c. 24; that is, a by Ordinance 16 of 1860. To re-enact this provision now, as proposed by the new Bitl, would be little less than travelling back to. wards the dark ages. We do not overlook which was something wherewith to buy the nucular papers to be considered. Some of the responsibilities of their position, as nese war, but on the whole we think that in from Canton wishing to start a paper in the colony might find some difficulty in obtaining the security required by the existing law. Sufficient condemnation of the Press regulationals, however, found in their utter uselessness. In the foreign settlement of Shanghai there is a flourishing Press, nativo and foreign, subject to no special regulations whatsoever; the papers are not even required to register; can any one point to the least jota of harm that has been done by the absence of regulations ? On the other hand, can any one point out the least good that has resulted from the Press laws of Hongkong?

Major Tripp then called up Gunner Mullett, R.A. the caretaker at Headquarters, and said it had also been deemed right to present him with a small acknowledgment of his services. The Corps appreciated his willingness to do all he could for them, and the way in which he fulfilled his duties. SIR, -Until the past year or two it was cuscomary to increase the attractions of the annual Horticultural Exhibition here by adding a poul-try show to it. That addition answered well for a time, and caused considerable interest until the thing died, as most such things do in this colony after a brief life. Could not some other show be tried in its place now that would in its turn be of equal interest? I think a dog show would be of even greater interest than a poultry show There is now a very considerable number of to-lerably well bred dogs in the colony, and a dog show would. I think, tend to further promote the keeping of well bred dogs. I should imagine that among our many sporting men it will not e difficult to find one or two who have sufficient knowledge of the points of a dog to be judges. If the thing were tried I should not be sur prised if there were not a large number entries of namerous breeds. I doubt if there would be quite enough of it to stand by itself, but in conjunction with the flower show I should think it would be a very considerable suc-

The way they manago chloroform in Franco is peculiar, says a correspondent. No qualified doctor is allowed to administer the narch'! unless assisted by a brother doctor, who times the pulse of the patient while his colleague is holding the drug to the patient's nose. French doctors, moreover, will not administer chloroform at all to certain patients, to whom it might cause disorder, or perhaps death. Before receiving his diploma, a Paris doctor has to prove that he knows at least everything in Letters, Science, and Art. On the other hand, anyone can set up as a dentist, even as an American dentist, which is considered the most chic, and dentists may administer chloroform at discretion without the presence of a doctor, or even of unother deutist ! One of the most famous Paris dentists, who was till late in life a locksmith, has just been prosecuted because a potient died under his hands: The patient, a rather stout gentleman, came to him one day and said. Mr. Glad tone's oratory is held by his admirers to be of a higher order than that of Fox, but he never touches a card. Lord Salisbury is a weighty thinker like Pitt, but he is the most abstemious of men. Yet a hundred years ago, no one thought much the worse of Fox for his high play, or of Pitt because he got through a couple of bottles of port at a sitting. It was the fashion, and nobody was secandalized George III, at one of his drawing rooms, remarked to a favourite courtier, "They tell me, Sir John, that you are fond of a glass of wine." "Those, Sir, who have so reported of me to your Majesty," replied Sir John, bowing profoundly, "have done me great injustice. They should have gaid a bottle." Rogers in his Table-talk-a most entertaining book—says that during his youth, Pitt was very weakly, and that his physician, Addington, ordered him to take port wine in large quantities, the consequence being that when he grew up, he Boliuso 30.01 | 50 could not do without it. Lord Granville has seen him swallow a fumbler full of port before going to the House of Commons, and Huskisson declared that Pitt's hand shook so that when helping himself to salt he had to support the right hand with the left. Stothard the painter happened to be one evening at an Inn on the Kent Road, when Pitt and Dundas put up there on their way from Walmer. Next morning, as they were stopping into their carriage, the waiter said to Stothard, "Sir, do you observe those two gentlemen?" "Yes," said Stothard, " and I know them to be Mr. Pitt and Mr. Dundas." "Well, Sir," continued the waiter, "how much wine do you think they drank last night?" Stothard said he had no idea. "Seven bottles, Sir," replied the waiter with respectful enthusiasm. . . . This is a large allowance. even for two gentlemen with the cares of office and the responsibility of governing the great British nation on their shoulders. A hundred years later we can only wonder how it was done. By the way, in connection with this subject, the humorous and well known speech made by Canning at a Ministerial fish dinner may be quoted. After his health had been proposed in a complimentary speech, and drunk with due honours, he said :- "In rising, gentlemen, to thank you for kindly drinking my health, I hope you will permit me to take a hint from the occasion which has brought us together. This, gentlemen, is a fish dinner. Fish drink much and say little.

While you follow their example in the first respect, allow us to fellow it in the second. I drink most cordially to the health of everyone
